

Title: No interpreter 1.

Summary:

You are in the audience of a public meeting. There are Deaf people in the audience too. It is announced that the interpreter isn't able to be there.

Key words:

CMS summary:

You are in the audience of a public meeting. There are Deaf people in the audience too. It is announced that the interpreter isn't able to be there.

Dilemma:

You are in the audience of a public meeting, not working, there just to attend the same as everyone else. There are Deaf people in the audience too.

Just before the event starts an announcement is made saying that there will be no interpreter, as they aren't able to be there.

Should you step up and offer your services? What about your clothes (if not dressed appropriately)? If you would rather just stay and be a member of the audience, is that ok?

Professional and Customer perspectives (if any):

Work role & Country of sender: UK, Interpreter